

Taming the Microsoft Teams Wild West

Without Proper Governance and Infrastructure, Microsoft Teams can Cause More Harm than Good

Our story begins in a small town in the Wild West where a company has just deployed Microsoft Teams with little instruction given to employees on how to use it.

Learn More About Collaboration Tools

Willy Weak Governance shoots too many Teams messages across the company, overloading the employees and creating even more cluttered communication than e-mail alone.

See How This Hurts Companies

Without a defined and controlled Teams environment, the feared outlaws "Willy Weak Governance" and "Sloppy Infrastructure Sam" show up and cause a ruckus for the company.

Sloppy Infrastructure Sam confuses the employees by creating too many Teams and Channels. They don't know how or where to communicate in Microsoft Teams for each project!

See How This Hurts Companies

"Over 200 Teams messages are being sent per week! This is taking up more of the employees's time than email is."

Thankfully, Sheriff McGhee rides in to save the day, recognizing that without the right infrastructure, governance, and leadership of Microsoft Teams, these Outlaws could rule the town!

See How We Do This

And how to create an approach to shared leadership by implementing a defined infrastructure that is custom to their town's goals.

See What Happens When Companies Do This

Sheriff McGhee starts implementing the best usage practices for Microsoft Teams. She shows the company leaders how to create and enforce communication and infrastructure governance that supports shared leadership and organizational goals.

See What You Can Do When This Happens

Now that the townspeople are using Teams with intent, Sheriff McGhee is able to capture the outlaws, restoring order and productivity to the company's Microsoft Teams environment!

At last, the employees are able to use Microsoft Teams as intended, resulting in vastly greater productivity and collaboration!

Bring This Success to Your Organization

Does your Teams environment feel like the Wild West?

Read our White Paper on Creating Governance and Infrastructure or contact us today at info@mcgheepro.com